

My experience of learning in lockdown. By Mason Howe.

I feel like learning at home in the first lockdown was a bit boring because I couldn't see or speak to my friends. This time because we are doing class calls three times a day I get to see and speak to everyone! Also, if I get stuck or find the work difficult, I can speak to a teacher and get some help, this has made my learning much easier this time.

Every school day I get up and start my day with my literacy call, I get my work from google classroom. I feel that this way is better than the worksheets we got in the first lockdown. The rest of the day I do my other calls and lessons. When my work is all done, I send pictures of my work on google classroom or Class Dojo to be marked. I can always message my teacher on Class Dojo too and I always look out for my points when the teachers marked my work, this makes me happy!
